FOUNDER AND LEADER

Déborah LE NOGUE

Déborah is a young pharmacist, researcher and consultant in public health with extensive experience acquired in France and abroad.

Passionate about health promotion, community health, health diplomacy and inter-cultural exchanges, her will to share her vision in these areas and to make her contribution lead her to settle down in Martinique in 2021.

Her project materialized in December 2022 when she founded the association Santé et Résilience in order to offer young people a transformative, innovative and fun health education journey.

I was selected as an Island Innovation Ambassador!

PURPOSE OF THE ASSOCIATION

Contributes to the reduction of social and territorial inequalities and vulnerabilities that weigh on the health of young inhabitants, users, citizens or patients

Constitutes a dynamic interface for exchange and mediation between young people and their peers, healthcare professional, institutions or members of civil society

Contributes to information, emancipation, blossoming and optimal realization of the full potential of young people

Education of young people in health prevention in order to guide their representations and behaviors towards informed options and choices compatible with the preservation of their human, animal and environmental health capital to guarantee their development and social inclusion at the individual and population level

Develop and strengthen young people's abilities

- ↗ health literacy, psychosocial skills
ability to critically analyze evidence,
power to act...
- ↗ individual/collective commitment

Youth health = common public good

Health promotion and prevention
“One Health” approach, Community Health
